By Telegraph.

New York, Aug. 22.—The early cotton market was a comparatively narrow one and the volume of speculation small. Trading was quite loose. At the opening the general feeling was barely steady, with prices 1/2 points to 3 points lower. The market developed a nervous feeling which continued throughout the session. Early cables were unsatisfactory and for a time, right after the opening, the feeling was toward higher prices on covering by some of the smaller shorts who were easily frightened, owing to the dictating character of crop news from the south and rather a better run from private sources. It became apparent, however, that outside orders were not being filled, and the market was not covered and also that the larger shorts were not covering. The market was not covered.
